FIFTEEN CENTS

Col. Harland Sanders and jockey Steve Cauthen met for the first time at the Tour Green estate on U.S. 60 west of Owensboro Friday. Judy Bachrach, left, of the Washington Post observes the meeting. The occasion was a picnic for American Academy of Achievement honorees. Besides Cauthen and Sanders, picnicers included Ed Asner, Debby Boone, Gloria Leachman, Tom Landry, John Sirica, Sen. Wendell Ford and Gov. Julian Carroll.

Stallings jury hung

By DAVID F. HILL

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. — A Christian Circuit Court jury reported it was hopelessly deadlocked early Saturday morning in the murder trial of former Owensboro Police Detective James C. Stallings.

The jury had been deliberating constantly for almost 14 hours before they reported to Christian Circuit Judge Steven P. White that they were split 9-3 for conviction and could not hope for more progress.

White promptly declared a mistrial. Commonwealth's Attorney Jim McDaniel said he will bring the case to court again, for the third time, but no date was immediately set.

Defense attorney James Early said, "Needless to say, we're extremely pleased with the outcome. I've never seen a jury with such stamina. They were in there for 14 hours. I'm sure they thrashed over everything."

Early added he was undecided about whether to ask for yet another change of venue in the case. The public defender, Stallings' second, said he will defend Stallings again.

The jury was trying to reach a verdict in the trial of Stallings on charges he shot his wife to death and set a fire in his home that killed three of his four children Aug. 12, 1975.

White had said about 11:30 p.m. Friday night he did not believe any jury in Kentucky had ever deliberated so long without informing the judge they could not reach a verdict.

About 4:20 p.m., after deliberating more than five hours, the jury had returned with a list of five questions for the court. They sought information on:

✓ When Stallings first asked to return to his car where the murder weapon was later found.

✓ What Dr. Oranhood had testified about the angle of the bullets fired into Cathryn Stallings.

✓ What the testimony was concerning whether Stallings' car was locked at his home on the morning of the fire.

✓ Who was present when Stallings gave his first statement.

✓ Who was present when the second statement was taken, and what time that was.

Judge White told the jurors, "There is no practical way the court can locate the testimony you have requested considering the volume of the last four days. You're going to have to rely on your recollection and do the best you can."

At 8 p.m., attorneys and White thought they had reached an agreement whereby the jury could go home for the night and return for further deliberations this morning.

Friday ceremony a night for the young

By DAN LOOKER

Messenger-Inquirer

It was a night for the young.

The recipients of Friday evening's Academy of Achievement Gold Plate Awards were nearly as young as their audience of high school students.

At 21, singer Debby Boone has outlasted single records by the Beatles, Elvis Presley and her father, Pat Boone, with her hit, "You Light Up My Life." At a mere 18, jockey Steve Cauthen, winner of the Triple Crown, has become the boy wonder of horse racing.

But when they faced their peers, high school academic whizzes and super achievers from across America, they were modest and almost self-effacing.

"Looking at all of you and knowing that you are achievers, especially academically, I feel a little out of place," Ms. Boone said, revealing that she hasn't had one semester hour of college education and that at one time she aspired to be a beautician, not a singer.

The students weren't too demanding with their questions. All they really wanted was to hear Debby Boone sing. "I didn't come prepared to sing," she said. "I don't have any instrumentation."

Someone started playing an electric organ at the back of the yellow canopy on the Robert Green estate, where the award dinner was held, west of the city. After the organist tried several keys, he found one that wasn't too high or too low and Ms. Boone sang a few bars of her hit record.

Cauthen was low-key. "You all must be very special because you've got an awful lot of nice people setting this up for you and so on and so forth," he said.

"I was no great student. I might as well tell you from the very beginning," he added, conceding that his grades fell into "the C's and a few D's here and there."

He said modestly that he had no grand scheme for his life, that he liked baseball and football "but they outgrew me." He discovered he could ride horses and "make a living at it."

When asked what he plans to do after he quits riding as a jockey, he said he might become a trainer, go back to college to become a veterinarian, or "maybe I'll just open up a corner drug store."

What did some of those bright contemporaries in the audience think of rubbing shoulders with Judge John Sirica, Gen.

Omar Bradley, Helen Hayes and Jimmy Doolittle?

Their applause for the glamorous and the powerful seemed to reflect the fast pace of contemporary history. It was television star Ed Asner who got one of the biggest standing ovations when celebrities were introduced. It was Asner who was greeted with screams and the outstretched arms of autograph seekers when he arrived for dinner before that.

One student said she admired his acting. "I've heard the name Helen Hayes but I don't know who she is. It's the same with Doolittle."

But none of the students scoffed at the value of rubbing shoulders with all those famous people.

Seventeen-year-old Kim Crosby, something of a celebrity herself as America's Junior Miss, said the well-known guests gave her more self-confidence when she discovered they seemed genuinely interested in the high school students.

"They told us we're not here to spend time with them, they're here to spend time with us."

Italian terrorists convicted

Associated Press

TURIN, Italy — After a three-month scourge of urban terror aimed at disrupting the trial, a Turin court Friday sentenced Red Brigades founder Renato Curcio and 28 others to up to 15 years in prison. Italian police braced for a wave of revenge attacks by urban guerrillas.

The verdict successfully ended the third attempt to try Curcio and other leaders of the Marxist revolutionary gang. Their comrades on the outside had tried to break up the trial by kidnapping former Premier Aldo Moro and demanding freedom for Curcio and three other defendants in exchange for Moro's life.

The government refused to bargain and Moro was slain by his kidnappers. During the three-month trial, the Red Brigades also claimed responsibility for killing 10 other persons, including Moro's wife, bodyguards (in the kidnap ambush), and threatened violence against judges, lawyers, jurors and witnesses.

The heaviest sentences, 15 years, went to Curcio and Pietro Basso. Three other Red Brigades ring leaders, Pietro Bertolozzi, Alberto Franceschini and Paolo Maurizio Ferrari, received sentences of between 13 and 15 years.

Seventeen other defendants were acquitted. RED BRIGADES (Continued on back page this section)

NAACP seeks resignations for 'racial discrimination'

By ART NAUL and JACK LYNNESS

Messenger-Inquirer

The Owensboro chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Friday called for the resignations of the city parks director and city pools supervisor for what it called "racial discrimination."

But Mayor Jack Fisher later told the Messenger-Inquirer he would not seek the resignations and characterized the controversy as an "overreaction."

The NAACP, in a meeting Thursday night, authorized its president, the Rev. Herman Floyd, to write a letter to the mayor and city commission protesting the closing last week of Kendall-Perkins Park swimming pool.

The pool, located in a predominantly black neighborhood, was closed after the last of three lifeguards originally hired to staff the pool quit June 12. Two of those original guards were black.

City officials said they initially closed the pool because there were no black lifeguards to transfer from another pool. After efforts to find new black applicants for the job were unsuccessful, two white guards were reassigned from another pool, and Kendall-Perkins was reopened Thursday after being closed for two days.

A story about the situation appeared in the June 13 edition of the Messenger-Inquirer. The Owensboro Human Relations Commission officially protested the pool closing in a letter delivered to the mayor last Tuesday.

Mayor Jack Fisher released a prepared reply to the commission Friday afternoon. When he received the NAACP resolution as well, Fisher said his reply also would apply to it.

Fisher said protests were "overreactions." He blamed the controversy on "distortions of daily operations problems we face while providing services to all members of the community." He said he would not seek the resignations of Parks Director John Mills or Pool Supervisor Jim Shrewsbury.

Much of the reaction seemed aimed at language used by Shrewsbury, quoted in the Messenger-Inquirer, describing problems that caused officials to hesitate before transferring other guards to the pool. "Until you've been down there and put up with all that crap, you wouldn't understand," he said in part.

Fisher said Friday Shrewsbury told him he was both misquoted and quoted out of context. Fisher also said he thought use of the language in the news story was in poor taste.

Contacted Friday evening, Shrewsbury would have no comment except to accuse the newspaper of "stirring up" the controversy. He hung up and later could not be reached.

Mills also could not be reached for comment.

The pools situation was handled in an "appalling discriminatory manner," the NAACP resolution said. "The stigma of separatism was quite obvious" in the news stories, the resolution said.

It said the considerations made in re-staffing the pools were a violation of the city's affirmative action program assuring equal employment — "not hiring blacks for blacks and whites for whites."

In the June 18 story, City Manager Max Rhoads was quoted saying the city would not ordinarily assign white guards to Kendall-Perkins pool, because "they'd run them off."

The NAACP challenged what they called "pure speculation" on Rhoads' part, noting that when white guards have been used in the past, "there were no reported incidents or problems and they were not run off."

Mills had said part of the problem in re-staffing the pool occurred because he was too busy with other things to give if his attention. The NAACP said if Mills "has so many responsibilities he can't properly administer, he should designate or allocate some of his responsibilities to someone else. The black community should not suffer" because of Mills' administration.

short-term loans for local governments facing cash flow problems.

The money comes from a state surplus accumulated during the past four years.

Local governments faced an average budget cut of 28 percent because of Proposition 13. The aid bill reduces the cuts to between 9 1/2 percent and 10 1/4 percent.

State Sen. Bill Campbell, a Republican who backed the proposition and wrote the aid bill, said the measure was "living proof we can make Proposition 13 work."

In the Assembly debate, Howard Berman, the Democratic floor leader, said Proposition 13 "was a lousy piece of legislation" but that the rescue bill proved "we can live with 13."

But state Sen. Dennis Carpenter, a Republican and one of the few foes of the bill, said sending surplus state funds to local government went against the spirit of the proposition.

Sadat works to mend Arab rift

Associated Press
CAIRO, Egypt — President Anwar Sadat, his peace drive further slowed by Israel's new stand on occupied territories, was making overtures Friday to the Arab states alienated by his alone diplomacy.

U.S. officials in Washington, meanwhile, reported Vice President Walter F. Mondale may be sent to Egypt for talks with Sadat in an effort to get Mideast negotiations going again. A stop in Alexandria for talks with Sadat would come after Mondale's trip to Israel scheduled for June 29-July 2.

Meanwhile, the Cairo newspaper Al Akhbar reported that the Carter administration wants to bring the Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers together next month in London to try to revive the stalled bilateral peace talks. And Sadat announced he is sending two key aides on diplomatic missions to Western Europe and Somalia.

Israel's refusal last weekend to commit itself to negotiate the permanent status of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip cast new doubt on the future of Sadat's peace initiative, which is deadlocked over Egypt's demand for self-determination for the Palestinians in those territories. The Israeli policy was spelled out in response to U.S. pressure.

Sadat said earlier this week that Israel's statement was "not the end of the world." But in Alexandria Thursday he sent out a signal that he wants to restore the Arab unity that was shattered by his solitary search for peace, a mission denounced by Libya and other hard-line and Israeli states as "traitorous" to the Arab cause. "We are ready to restore diplomatic relations with Libya... but first, Israel must be stopped against Egypt should be stopped because all those rejectionist countries owe much to Egypt," he told a news conference after meeting with Presidents Ahmed Sekou Toure of Guinea and Moammed Siad Barre of Somalia. Toure said Sadat told him he was prepared to restore diplomatic relations with all five rejectionist nations — Libya, Iraq, Algeria, Syria and South Yemen. He broke ties with the five last Dec. 5 after they met and vowed to "freeze" relations with Egypt.

Sadat told reporters that though he is willing to resume relations with Libya "I am not ready to put my hand in Khadafi's hand." Sadat and Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi have exchanged sharp personal attacks, each accusing the other of being mentally deranged.

The rejectionists charge that Sadat's peace efforts weakened the united Arab political front against Israel. A reconciliation in the view of some, would force Israel to make greater concessions and pave the way to a comprehensive settlement more to the Arabs' liking.

Maine state troopers enter the main gate of the Seabrook, N.H., Nuclear Power Station Friday, joining state troopers from Rhode Island as a security force for the construction

Carter rebukes Brzezinski critics

Associated Press
FORT WORTH, Texas — President Carter said Friday his national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, is being unfairly made a scapegoat by critics of U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union.

Carter, fielding audience questions after speaking to a civic group at the beginning of a two-day visit to Texas, said unnamed special interest groups within the United States are attacking Brzezinski.

In his speech, Carter pleaded anew for passage of his energy program and for cooperation with the administration's anti-inflation campaign. The president was scheduled to address a fund-raising dinner in Houston late Friday.

Carter's first trip to Texas since taking office mingles politics and policy in a state that was a key to his 1976 election victory.

Carter said critics are zeroing in on Brzezinski when they really should direct the criticism at the president. And Carter added that he believes it is unfair for the Soviets and Cuba to "jump on Brzezinski."

The president made the remarks during a question-and-answer session in which he strenuously denied reports of dissension among his foreign policy advisers.

"Unfortunately, in our country quite often special interest groups who don't like what I decide — and I'm president, and I make the final decisions — always look for a scapegoat or someone they can attack without attacking me personally," he said.

The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda had attacked Brzezinski for allegedly being overly hostile to the Soviets. And last week, Cuban President Fidel Castro's harshly criticized Brzezinski in an interview with U.S. network television correspondents.

Carter also said the United States should not be second to the Russians in economic, moral or political strength.

"I believe that the best way to get along with the Soviet Union and to emphasize friendship and cooperation and peace, is for our country to be consistent, is for our country to be strong," he said. Carter said, "I'm determined to have a SALT (strategic arms limitation) agreement with the Soviet Union without unwarranted delay. We're making good progress."

Though the gist of his off-the-cuff remarks echoed Carter's speech given earlier this month at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., it was believed the first time the president responded directly to criticism of Brzezinski.

During his prepared speech, Carter asserted that "our national will is being tested" in the battle over a national energy program.

Carter, arriving in early afternoon for the luncheon appearance, immediately addressed complaints from two important segments of the state's economy — gas producers and cattle raisers.

The president introduced the energy legislation in April 1977, declaring that fuel conservation must be given a priority that is "the moral equivalent of war."

Carter's statement about challenges to the nation's will was an apparent reference to the administration's 15-month-long, futile battle to win congressional enactment of the program.

He said fuels must be conserved while "adequate incentives" are provided to oil and gas producers to search for new supplies.

As in the past, Carter stressed that the United States is the only industrialized country that has not cut back on oil consumption since the 1973-74 Arab embargo.

Associated Press

Today is Saturday, June 24, the 176th day of 1978. There are 190 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1948, the Communists began a blockade of the city of Berlin, halting Allied land traffic between the isolated city and West Germany.

In 1497, the first recorded discovery of the mainland of North America occurred as the explorer, John Cabot, sighted land between Halifax and southern Labrador.

In 1958, Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser was elected President of Egypt.

Ten years ago the U.S. Senate completed legislative action on a bill setting the observance of five annual national holidays on Mon-

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon and the Soviet leader, Leonid Brezhnev, ended a Washington meeting with a joint declaration that their talks had moved the entire world toward a durable, stable peace.

One year ago: The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development ended a meeting in Paris by announcing a goal for the next year of a 5 percent growth rate by the 24 member countries.

Today's birthdays: Former heavyweight boxing champion Jack Dempsey is 83 years old. Former baseballer Phil Harris is 77. Third baseman Ken Reitz of the St. Louis Cardinals is 27.

Thought for today: To know the truth is easy. But, ah, how difficult to follow it — a Chinese saying.

Cleveland mayor recall to be decided by voters

Associated Press
CLEVELAND — "Bring on the recall," said embattled Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich. "I'll take it on and I'll win. I'll reunite this city."

With that vow at a news conference Friday, the 31-year-old maverick Democrat prepared to fight efforts to remove him from office by taking the issue to the people.

Moments before the news conference, City Clerk Mercedes Cotner set the stage for the recall by certifying that more than the required 37,562 valid signatures were on recall petitions.

The recall election is required in 40 to 60 days unless Kucinich resigns within the next five days — a course the mayor has repeatedly rejected.

Once the five-day period is up, the council must set an election date.

It takes a majority vote to remove the mayor, who would be out of office immediately upon certification of defeat. The council would select an interim mayor pending another election, Mrs. Cotner said.

Thursday, the state Supreme Court upheld lower court rulings that any registered Cleveland voter was eligible to sign recall petitions. Kucinich had contended the petition process should be limited to those who voted for mayor last Nov. 8. But he said Friday he saw no plans to appeal the state court ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Cleveland will prove it is a city with a heart, a city where justice can be gained in the court of public opinion, if not in a court of law," said Kucinich, whose administration began Nov. 14.

He produced a black and orange bumper sticker saying, "Support Kucinich the people's mayor." He said he ordered them prior to his final court setback Thursday.

Court upholds prisoners' rights

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, in a major decision on prisoners' rights, ruled Friday that federal judges may limit the time state officials can keep inmates in "punitive isolation."

Voting 8-1, the justices upheld a lower court ruling that Arkansas prison officials impose "cruel and unusual" punishment on inmates when forcing them to stay in special punishment cells for longer than 30 days.

In other rulings released Friday, the justices split 5-4 in upholding a ruling by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the Arkansas treasury must pay $22,500 in fees to lawyers who successfully sued the state prison system. The court rejected Arkansas' argument that the Constitution's 11th Amendment protects it from such awards.

The court voted 7-2 to strike down a New Jersey law which prohibits other states from dumping their garbage in New Jersey. Waste disposal — disposal firms being paid to remove garbage and dump owners being paid for the use of their land — is a commercial transaction protected by the Constitution's protection for interstate business, the court said.

The decision in the Arkansas prisoners' case significantly expands the authority of federal judges in overseeing conditions in state prisons. But it does not mean all state prison systems must limit the so-called punitive isolation of inmates to 30 days.

"The length of isolation sentences was not considered in a vacuum," Justice John Paul Stevens said about the Arkansas case, sparked by a 1969 prisoners' lawsuit.

"Punitive isolation is not necessarily unconstitutional, but it may be, depending on the duration of the confinement and the

Speakers try to inspire student leaders

By KEITH LAWRENCE

It was like watching a wax museum come to life.

Lowell Thomas, Olivia De Havilland and Judge John Sirica strolled around, signed autographs and talked to clusters of high school student leaders from around the country.

Up on the stage Col. Harland Sanders, Gen. Omar Bradley, Judge Frank Johnson, Col. Ulrich Wegener and others talked about themselves and tried to inspire the youngsters to make the most of their future.

It was hard not to be inspired. Few of those men began life with half the advantages of some of the students. Most of them lived the classic American rags-to-riches story.

They made it sound so easy. In the few minutes they spoke there wasn't time to tell about the price they had paid. But you could see it by watching some of them as they walked around the Executive Inn Riverfront during the American Academy of Achievement convention.

For instance, every time you saw Col. Wegener, the West German commando hero, you also saw the eight bodyguards who dog his footsteps to protect him. That was part of the price he paid for the weekend's honors.

Whoever had the flashbulb concession was making a mint. Students were busy snapping pictures of celebrities and new friends and there was a constant twinkling of flashes as a new speaker was introduced.

This, in capsule form, is what students at the symposium in the International Room and Showroom Lounge heard from a dozen speakers in seven hours Friday.

Sanders: "All these big fellows here started small. . . Don't give up. . . If you're convinced it's good, don't give up."

Don't look for fringe benefits. . . His fried chicken empire was started with a $108 Social Security check in 1952 after an interstate highway built seven miles from his family restaurant in Corbin, Ky., put him out of business.

He sold the franchise business 14 years later for $2 million. "I don't take but about three or four years to go back from riches to rags. I can tell you that," he said.

Politician Prize-winning cartoonist Tony Auth of the Philadelphia Inquirer: "Don't be seduced (by success). The 40 or so honorees here are among the most individualistic and the least willing to conform. Society heaps most of its honors on those who conform but gives its highest honors to those who do not."

"Washington is the ultimate seduction capital. I find it uncomfortable to associate with people I might be drawing later."

George Mitchell: Son of Greek immigrants, Mitchell began his career as a roughneck in Louisiana oilfields. He told the students, "My story is really the story of America."

"Sometimes you do things that are risky and don't make sense. But somehow they work out."

The predicted America would solve its energy problems in the next 20 years "even with the muddling in Congress or 15 years with their help."

For the students, he said, "There are great opportunities ahead. All the honors here would like to be in your place. I envy the future. I envy you and I salute you."

U.S. Sen. Wendell Ford: Ford emphasized his farm roots as "the boy from Yellow Creek" and told of days spent plowing behind a mule and weekend trips to the city (Owensboro).

"Congress is imperfect because we don't know all the answers. There are no victories in Washington, just varying degrees of defeat. Congress has given this country too many regulations and too much paper work."

He advised them, "Don't get too big for your britches. If you do somebody will bring you back to earth when you least expect it."

Col. Wegener: He told of his work as commander of an anti-terrorist unit and advised the students, "You can fight intolerance and you can do a lot more."

He noted that as far as is known there is not now a worldwide terrorist organization but there is a growing internationalization of terrorism.

Judge Johnson: He recounted the civil rights struggles in the South during the '60s and read to the students his charge to a federal jury hearing the cases of three Ku Klux Klansmen charged with conspiring to violate the civil rights of a woman civil rights worker they had killed.

"It's difficult now to imagine the social and economic pressures on that jury," he said. But they returned a verdict of guilty.

Asked about reverse discrimination cases, he said, "I don't think there's any such thing as just discrimination."

Gen. Bradley, the only one to draw a standing ovation: "In this audience is our future leadership. Did you ever see a layman get very far? Humility is a great asset. Don't think you know it all. Be humble. Never give up. We have the greatest country in the world and the best soldiers."

Fred L. Hartley, chairman of Union Oil of California: "Try to be enthusiastic about whatever you do. Those that do it best get the business. We've got to stop those in America who are trying to bring our system to an end."

He said, "I don't accept that we're a nation that must live within its limits. This company is involved in geothermal steam production which is meeting energy needs that way and he hopes to see shale oil filling many oil needs in the near future."

Shale oil reserves in this country could make those in the Midwest look dim by comparison, he said.

Hana Kornell, a California winemaker who came to America after fleeing a Nazi concentration camp: "This is sure a long way from that concentration camp."

He told the audience he had been Kentucky's first champagne maker in 1941 before moving to California.

"If you make a mistake, admit it. Don't hide anything. Eventually it comes out. Never accept no as an answer. It's still a free country. Maybe it's a little harder, but it's a wonderful feeling to be independent."

He drew applause when he criticized the age 21 limit on drinking of alcoholic beverages. "If our youth get wine and drink it moderately, we won't have the problems we have now," he said.

Sean MacBride, former foreign minister of Ireland, founder of Amnesty International and 1974 Nobel Peace Prize winner: "The most important thing in a democracy is your right to hold and express your opinion. . . We are living through an extremely dangerous period. . . We must keep the world from hurting itself into self-destruction."

"Seeing Cloris Leachman show up in tennis shoes made me feel good," added Lisa K. Edison of Minot, N.D.

What did the students learn from all those famous people?

Kim Crosby said she found that you can still do what you want in America if you set goals for yourself and work toward them. It seemed like a lot of these people started from impossible odds," she said.

Some of the students got a small boost from corporate America this week.

U.S. Steel brought Margaret L. Forchheim, a presidential scholar from York, Pa., to Owensboro. Beatrice Picked up the tab for National Merit Semifinalist Debra K. Miller of Beatrice, Neb. Neither knew how much the trip cost.

Ma. Miller wasn't impressed by the autograph signing.

"This stuff, I think is kind of ridiculous, this mobbing people! During the day, however, 'you get to talk to people in a little more normal surrounding, this is a shame,'" she said, as the click of photographers' cameras drifted across the groups of students and reporters clustered around Sirica, Cauten, Asner and others.

Ms. Forchheim thought the whole event was planned "to inspire you to greater heights. . . A lot of the businessmen here are like the American dream. You don't think of that occurring except in F. Scott Fitzgerald novels."

When asked if she believed that American dream of rags to riches success, Ms. Forchheim replied, "It was real at one time. I don't know if it is real anymore or not."

nistrative problems, the resolution said. "It seems whenever priority judgment have to be made, the black community always ranks last," the letter said.

In his response to the Human Relations Commission letter, which was critical but "somewhat more restrained," Fisher said protesters are "overreacting."

"Common sense would indicate that the spontaneous remarks of a city employee represent neither overall city policy or attitude. . . Unless you are advocating a boycott of city employees by management to prevent the free expression of personal views, all we can hope for is for the news media to use good taste in reporting."

David Kelly, a member of the NAACP executive committee and former city affirmative action officer, said the resolution drafted by Floyd was based on the consensus of the eight committee members who attended the Thursday meeting.

"We felt pretty strongly that there was a Jim Crow mentality still pervasive or prevalent in the parks program as it applies to Kendall-Perkins Park," he said.

"The statement pertaining to 'all that crap' and 'those people,' and those names and innuendoes were rather Jim Crowish," Kelly said.

"Personally, I worked two years as a lifeguard at Kendall-Perkins Park with two white lifeguards and never had any 'crap,'" he said.

"We felt that the person who made that statement should certainly resign," Kelly said. "We felt that a person who expressed that viewpoint who had a public trust should not hold that public trust."

"It's not rough," Kelly said. "Children aren't any more mischievous at Kendall-Perkins Park than they are at Mike Cravens pool or Chataqua pool. I've been to all pool locations and they aren't any more mischievous in those pools. I don't put much faith in that stereotype."

David Bartholomew is the city's playground supervisor in Kendall Perkins

Park, and is white. "The kids who go there to swim don't care whether their lifeguards are black or white," he said.

"They're normal kids, they want their pool open."

Mevin Smith, another NAACP executive committee member, said, "The incident to me was irresponsible statements coming from people who are supposed to be representing the people of the city as a whole."

"I don't think we should have people with those irresponsible qualities working for the people," he said. "It was said as if there was no incident that happens at any other pool except when you're dealing with blacks in that particular area."

"I would hope that a manpower shortage resulting in the closing of the swimming pool would not be construed as damaging to race relations," Fisher said.

The circumstances surrounding the closing surely would not justify the incident. The closing on June 13 resulted from the failure of the lifeguard on duty to notify Jim Shrewsbury of his resignation prior to pool opening time.

Shrewsbury and Mills both said on June 13 that the guard at the pool informed them he was quitting early Monday afternoon, June 12. "That's not the information I've got," Fisher said Friday.

Fisher said other pools at the time "had minimum guards." That conflicts with Mills' initial statement that the reassignment of two guards to reopen the pool would mean only that guards at other pools "might not be able to take a break when they normally would."

Fisher also said rescheduling was difficult because lifeguards work only 40 hours a week.

"You should be aware that in the past, black as well as white lifeguards have refused to transfer to Kendall-Perkins pool," Fisher said. "Since we are understaffed, it would make little sense to cause lifeguards to resign from the other pools."

Fisher also said protesters are "far off base" criticizing the city's affirmative action plan. "Every reasonable effort has been made in the past three years to provide black lifeguards," he said.

Fisher said eight city personnel had tried to encourage black teenagers to enroll in lifesaving classes. A free course offered by the city, which started last Monday, drew only two blacks on the first day. One quit. The second is under 18 years old — the minimum required age for lifeguards, Fisher said.

The two black guards hired at Kendall-Perkins who later quit meant that initially 9.5 percent of the city's lifeguards at all pools were black, Fisher said. "This compares favorably considering the city's population of 8 percent minority."

"Affirmative action is a two-way street," Fisher said. "While affirmative action was pursued by the city through a rigorous recruiting effort, an interest in employment as a lifeguard does not appear to exist among many teenagers today."

Fisher also told the human relations group the city spent more than $70,000 renovating the pool in 1976, and reminded it the city had provided $18,000 for its program "in an effort to support continually improving relations with all citizens. I hope this effort will not be undermined by distortions of daily operations problems we face while providing services to all members of the community."

Fisher said he spent two days preparing his reply "and that's all that I'll say."

One member of the city commission, Tom Morton, voiced support for Mills and Shrewsbury. "I don't think it's discrimination," Morton said. "It's kind of bad, of course, but I could understand them trying to get colored lifeguards down there." He said he thought the closing of the pool was appropriate "at the time."

"It might have been poor judgment," Morton said, but added he wouldn't support the call for resignations. "I'm certainly not in favor of that. I don't think you could get better men."

Commissioners John Medley and Bill Richard each declined comment, saying they had not investigated the complaints and knew "only what I read in the newspaper." Commissioner Claudia Myles and City Manager Max Rhoads, both attending a meeting of the Kentucky Municipal League at Lake Malheur, could not be reached for comment.

ing. The judge may allow such an arrangement if both defense and prosecution agree.

But a few minutes later, defense attorney James Early went back to White and said he had misunderstood, and would not agree to the arrangement.

Stallings was convicted of the shooting death of his wife by a Hopkins County jury in April 1976, but the conviction was later overturned by the Kentucky Supreme Court. That jury was unable to reach a verdict on the charge of murdering by arson three of his children: Michael, 21; Philip, 20; and Katherine, 16.

The Supreme Court ordered a new trial for Stallings on the grounds that Hopkins Circuit Judge Thomas Spain should not have allowed "the irrelevant and highly prejudicial" comments about the shooting death of Stallings' first wife Shirley, in 1974, combined with Stallings' prior love affair with Kathryn.

Shirley Stallings died of a gunshot wound inflicted when Stallings said he dropped his service revolver while dressing. A coroner ruled the death was accidental.

During closing arguments Friday morning, Early told the jury that the prosecution case was too good, and he suggested there was a conspiracy to put Stallings away.

"It is too obvious in this case that Jim Stallings' wife, the commonwealth says he did it, it's like TV," Early told the jury. "I could not and will not believe a man who taught criminal investigation and evidence collection for seven years could commit this crime."

He said in his opinion both Stallings and his wife knew something about drugs in Owensboro. He suggested it was those involved in drug traffic who murdered Kathryn Stallings.

Before closing arguments, Early recalled Owensboro Police Detective Jack Braden to ask about threats against Stallings' family that the defendant allegedly gave in Braden's presence. Early made much of Braden's admission that, though he had testified in the case four or five times previously, he had never mentioned the threats he said Stallings made.

Early strongly hinted that the conspiracy to convict Stallings extended into official circles.

"All of that which appears fresh and clean is not," he told the jury. "We've seen it in Washington, and it goes on not just at the highest level, but every day in every function of American life."

"This case is a frameup," he concluded. "Don't guess Jim into prison unless you know in your heart and mind that Jim did this."

With a rising tone of indignation in his voice, Commonwealth Attorney Jim McDaniel reviewed for the jury the evidence against Stallings and scoffed at the suggestion there was a conspiracy.

"He's in court because things went wrong," McDaniel told the jury. "He was doing fine until Otto Bishop came along, honed his horn and drew people's attention."

He said the most damaging evidence was testimony that Kathryn had been shot from the side and only one foot away, and that Stallings' returned bullets were fired from 32 inches above the floor.

Stallings testified an intruder shot his wife from the foot of the bed and he returned fire while lying on the floor.

McDaniel said like the domino effect, if jurors believed Stallings had shot his wife, then they must believe he set the fire that killed three of his children. Almost choking with emotion, McDaniel told the jury he had recently lost two grandchildren, one in a fire.

"Here are three children burning to death; here is his wife dying on the front lawn, and here is Stallings — calm."

"I don't believe he could have been so calm if he were not the perpetrator."

quitted, and two others were not judged because of other trials pending against them.

Curcio, 36, the bearded former philosophy student who founded the revolutionary gang in the early 1970s, could have received up to 21 years on the charges of forming an armed band to overthrow the state and taking part in political kidnappings. The prosecutor asked for 15 years, and some Italian commentators called this too light.

Among five defendants convicted at large were two men charged in the March 16 kidnapping of Moro — Prospero Gallinari, sentenced to 10 years, and Mario Moretti, sentenced to five.

Curcio and the 14 other defendants who remained in jail throughout the trial refused to leave their cells Friday when Presiding Judge Guido Barbato read out the verdicts in the bunker-like courthouse, which was surrounded by 800 heavily armed officers. The jury had deliberated for almost five days, a record for jury trials in Italy.

Through lawyers, Curcio and the others made known they were not interested in the decision by a "court of the regime."

Several relatives of the defendants appeared in court for the sentencing. They sat silently, then rushed out, trying to dodge photographers and covering their faces with newspapers.

The mother of Arnaldo Lininrai, sentenced to 9 1/2 years, angrily told a reporter outside the courthouse her son would get out of jail before the end of his sentence.

The first attempt to try the Red Brigades leaders in 1976 was interrupted by the killing of a Genoa magistrate. Curcio boasted he had ordered the murder. The killing of the president of the Turin bar association and threats to jurors halted the second attempt.

Nadia Montavani, Curcio's girlfriend and the only woman among the jailed defendants, was given a five-year term.

Pros bested 68 by Kirkpatrick pro-am's best score

By GARY KULA

Messenger-Inquirer

Steve Kirkpatrick entered the 1978 Hydrofair Pro-Am Golf Tournament for the same reason more than 100 other area amateurs signed up for the event.

He just wanted a chance to play a round of golf with one of the pros and enjoy himself. Some notables were there for the same reason. Goy Julian Carroll played and "had a ball — a delightful time," despite his 93.

Former Green Bay Packer great Jerry Kramer, now residing in Owensboro and running a local mining firm, competed even though it meant passing up a chance to be with old football cronies at the annual Lombardi Golf putting in Milwaukee, Wis.

The pros were there shooting for more than $2,500 in prize money. Clint Wright from Madisonville's Lakeshore Country Club took home the big bucks after firing a two-under par 69. That was good for $800.

But Kirkpatrick was the big story. He not only shot the lowest score by an amateur but his three-under 68 was better than anything the 41 pros could throw at the 4,433-yard Ben Hawes State Park Golf Course layout.

"I'd say it was very unusual," Kirkpatrick, a 25-year-old sales representative for a local manufacturing firm, said. "That's my best round ever at Hawes."

Kirkpatrick, whose round included an eagle, four birdies and three bogeys, found it hard to believe what happened.

"I was telling people before the tournament that I haven't played that much so far this year," Kirkpatrick said. "I'd been practicing fairly hard lately for some of the upcoming tournaments but I was just going out to enjoy myself. I couldn't believe it. Those guys were some of the best pros in the state."

Kirkpatrick counts an Owensboro Country Club championship among his prior golfing accomplishments and finished third in an Owensboro City Golf Championship. But, he says, those accomplishments don't compare with this.

"I really wasn't anticipating playing this well," Kirkpatrick added. "I was really excited."

Kirkpatrick collected a gift certificate of $50 for firing the lowest round by an amateur and received another certificate for $75 for being a member of the winning pro-am team. Kirkpatrick teamed with Greg Charney, a pro from Oak Meadow Country Club in Evansville, Ind., Gary Akers and Nick Nicholas to win the pro-am event.

Another Owensboro amateur, Tom Dickinson, got in on the act. Dickinson got a hole-in-one on the 150-yard par three third hole.

Wright won the pro segment of the event by one stroke over Alan White of the Owensboro Country Club, Jon Leonard of Oak Meadow and Bill Crabtree of Christman's Lake Golf Course at Santa Santa Claus, Ind.

Those three split second place money and took home $568.45 apiece. Six pros tied for fifth after shooting 71s.

Winning $150 apiece were Carl Owen of Chenoweth Country Club in Louisville, Owensboro native Jeff McGill of the Madisonville Country Club, Greg Charney, Earl Greenwell of Clearcrest Country Club in Evansville, Rocky Schooley of Portland, Tenn., Country Club in and Jon Nicholas of Mount Carmel, Ill., Country Club.

Pro winner Wright has Owensboro ties. The 31-year-old pro graduated from Daviess County High School and attended Kentucky Wesleyan College for one year.

Owensboro's Bobby Lacy had the second lowest round among the amateurs. Lacy shot a 71.

looked like when we got it." The state park system purchased the park and golf course in 1975.

Renovations just completed this spring include new asphalt cart paths throughout the 18 holes, new sand traps, a new cart house and renovated greens.

Thomas also revealed that Ben Hawes golf course is the most used state park course in Kentucky with about 500 more rounds per month in June than the second leading park Kentucky Dam Village.

"It's in the best shape it's ever been in," Thomas said, "and I know what INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana's height, Indiana's attitude and "bad press" has Apollo High School's Jeff Jones and his Kentucky All-Star teammates up in arms.

"We're determined to win for three reasons," Jones said. "First, they're just so much bigger than us. Second, Indiana's players came up to some of our people and said some things. They tried to embarrass some of our guys in public, like at this banquet where they said they'd put the ball back in our face and stuff like that."

"And third, the Louisville papers write more about the Indiana team than us and there were more Indiana people at the game (last Saturday's game) than from Kentucky. It's like playing two away games."

The Indiana Stars dumped Kentucky 100-80 in the first of their annual two-game All-Star basketball series last week.

Lexington Bates Creek's Vince Taylor led Kentucky in scoring with 22 points, followed by Jones with 18. Jones started to assert himself after Taylor fouled out with just over five minutes left.

However, the Virginia-bound guard couldn't make up the deficit by himself. Louisville Ballard's Jerry Eaves scored 11 points and Kentucky's "Mr. Basketball" Doug Schommer of Covington Holmes, scored six.

Kentucky outrebounded Indiana 39-36, a point which distressed Indiana Coach Eric Clark.

"Our kids were more concerned about getting out on the fast break instead of going to the boards, and all of the loose balls were going to Kentucky," said Clark. "We can't be waiting for the ball to come to us. Our rebounders definitely have to do a better job this time."

He concedes, however, it will be hard for the Hoosiers to improve on their 55 percent shooting and only 12 errors, in last week's game at Louisville.

"I can't see letting Kentucky work all week on what we've been doing on offense. We'll have two or three new things to use against that zone defense," he said.

One of the changes Clark is considering is putting his two biggest men in the lineup at the same time — 7-foot-1 Wallace Bryant and 6-foot-10 Landis Turner. Kentucky's tallest player is 6-6.

"We've been spending a lot of time experimenting with that combination on both offense and defense," Clark said. "Turner and Bryant combined for 35 points in Tuesday's practice game at North Montgomery."

"My fear of playing them at the same time was foul trouble," Clark said. "If you get both in foul trouble at the same time, then we're without size. And it was our height advantage which forced Kentucky into the zone defense. Their zone doesn't worry me because we have the outside shooting."

"We're working against the zone in practice and we're trying to sharpen up our patterns. And we're working on man-to-man, full-court trap and half-court presses. We let Taylor penetrate too much last Saturday."

Kentucky Coach Tom Creamer indicated he might use the four-corner offense against the Hoosiers, the same tactic Indiana employed last week when its big lead was whittled down late in the game.

"We're going to spread out right at the start and just start lobbing the ball around," said Creamer. "We'll see how the crowd likes that."

Longshots lead Canadian golf

Associated Press

OXFORD, Ontario — Ben Crenshaw blew the lead with a horrendous nine on one hole and let a couple of longshots, Jeff Hewes and rookie Pat McGowan, set the second-round pace Friday in the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

The 23-year-old McGowan birdied his final hole for a 3-under par 68 and a 36-hole total of 140, two shots under par on the difficult, 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

Hewes, the skinny struggler who led the first round with a 67, went to a 73 and also was 2-under par for this national championship.

Crenshaw, playing well after he had finished, was breezing along at 3-under par, one shot in front of the field, 2-under for the day and apparently in command until he reached the 18th hole, his ninth hole of the day.

Then Glen Abbey grabbed him. He dropped his third shot into the pond that guards the green on the par-3 hole, and had to take a penalty. His troubles were just starting.

Ben walked back down the fairway, some 90 yards or so and hit into a bunker before the green. That was shot No. 5. He exploded out of the hole of the putting surface in the rough. No. 6.

He chipped 15 feet past the hole. No. 7. He ran his first putt two feet by the hole. No. 8.

And he made the 3-foot No. 9. When it was finally over the disgruntled Crenshaw dropped his putter and applauded himself, clapping his hands in self-congratulation.

"What can I say? That's just an awful big number on one hole," Crenshaw said after he finished with a 74 that put him at 144, four shots off the pace.

"I hit two bad shots and they cost me a lot. I went to sleep on my third shot, quit on it and it drifted to the right. Then I hit a bad shot after the drop. That's the real sin. I was trying to get too cute with it, get it close to the hole, and buried it in the bunker."

"After a while I was just trying to finish. I was looking for a place to hide, but there was no place to go, nothing to do but keep on flailing at it."

"It's an awful lonesome feeling."

But Crenshaw wasn't alone in his troubles. Arnold Palmer, from a tie for second, birdied three of his last five holes for a 76 and 148.

Tom Weiskopf, a two-time Canadian champion, also shot 76 but, at 153, failed to qualify for the last two rounds.

Hubert Green also was a casualty. He shot 77-158. Andy North, winner of the U.S. Open last week, was 77-149. The scores ranged up to the 90-171 posted by Canadian pro Bill Kozak.

John Schroeder, with a solid 4-under-par 67, and veteran Jim Colbert, with a 70, were a single shot off the lead at 141, and with Hewes and McGowan, were the only men able to break par for two trips over the course Jack Nicklaus designed as a permanent site for this national championship.

Australian Bob Shearer was 71-142. Nicklaus had a 72 and was tied at 145 with Masters champ Gary Player and defending title-holder Lee Trevino. Trevino and Player each shot 71.

"I'm a little disappointed with that 72," Nicklaus said. "It's about as high as I could have shot."

"Still, I'm not that far back, not so far back that a good round won't put me back in it. I'm not saying I'll have a good round, but I'm getting pretty tired of shooting bad ones."

Now for the Hydrofair tourney

The 1978 Hydrofair Golf Tournament has drawn its largest field ever with about 240 golfers teeing off this morning, starting at about 7:30 a.m.

The tournament will follow a two-day, 36-hole format, very much like Hydrofair golf tournaments of past years.

Approximately 200 golfers played in the tournament last year. This year the tournament will consist of eight flights with over $4,000 worth of prizes going to the top 11 finishers in each flight.

Coy said that the foursomes will will tee off on the first tee every seven minutes after the start.

Richie Moore won the event last year with a two-day total of 140 strokes. Moore shot a sizzling 69 the first day of the competition and didn't cool off much the next day, shooting a solid 71. However, Moore declined to defend his crown.

Bobo Foster of Owensboro, last year's runner-up with a two-day score of 142, has a conflict with work this year and won't be playing either.

Roger McPherson won the first flight in 1977 and Darrell Brown won the second followed by George Kuhlenschmidt in the third, Foley Fendley the fourth, Charles Knight the fifth and Tom Knight the sixth.

This year's tournament will also be showing off the recent facelift the Ben Hawes course has recently received.

Carl Thomas, Director of Kentucky Recreational Parks, Museums and Shrines, was on hand Friday's Pro-Am at Ben Hawes and was generous in his praise of the course.

"It's in the best shape it's ever been in," Thomas said, "and I know what it Minnesota's Rod Carew continues to lead all players in votes for the 1978 All-Star team. He has received 1,276,620 votes and holds a lead of some 900,000 over Mike Hargrove of Texas for the American League's starting first base job, according to figures released Friday.

Boston's Jim Rice has received 1,115,442 for a wide lead among the outfielders. Reggie Jackson of New York is running second with 749,584 followed by Texas' Richie Zisk with 684,528.

Besides Carew, the infield leaders are second baseman Willie Randolph of New York, shortstop Fred Patek and third baseman George Brett, both of Kansas City. Boston's Carlton Fisk leads the catchers.

Ali declares his candidacy

Being heavyweight champion of the world isn't enough for Muhammad Ali. Now he wants to be president of the WORLD.

"The unofficial Andy Young" declared his candidacy at 8:45 a.m. Friday with his left leg out on a soapbox but in a car that was to whisk him from a television appearance to his home.

"I've got to do something. I am 36 years old. I'm the world's most recognized human. What am I going to do? I'm not just going to go fishing or make movies. I got to do something and what I'm going to do is deal with the world," he said.

"We'd like to organize something called WORLD — World Organization for Rights, Liberty and Dignity."

Mantle removed from critical list

Former baseball superstar Mickey Mantle said he was "feeling pretty good" Friday after having been taken off the critical list suffering from bleeding ulcers.

"It was not quite all that bad," said the former New York Yankees' star outfielder. "I'm feeling pretty good today. I had just lost a lot of blood. I've been on a pretty tough schedule the first part of the summer. I'll just have to slow down."

Mantle, 47, hospitalized in critical condition Wednesday, was taken from the intensive care unit of a Dallas hospital Friday morning and given a private room. His condition was listed as good.

"Once I got the blood back I was okay," he said. "They were going to put me on a liquid diet but they changed their minds, and I ate a good lunch."

Dr. Frank Allick said Mantle could be released from the hospital "in a few days," but he said he could not be more specific at this time.

Roy True, Mantle's attorney and busness associate, said Mantle had abdominal pains Tuesday night and woke up with the bleeding ulcers.

"The guy lies just been on the road, one place to another, and the guy is just tired," True said.

Mantle, who has claimed Dallas as his home for several years, is baseball's sixth-leading home run hitter. He was named Most Valuable Player in the American League three times and was elected to baseball's Hall of Fame in 1974.

Rick Robey, University of Kentucky forward and the first-round draft choice of the Indiana Pacers, has filed for divorce from his wife of 11½ months, Mary Diane McCord Robey. Court records in Lexington show the 22-year-old New Orleans native filed a petition for dissolution of marriage on June 2. An amended petition filed June 18 said "the marriage is irretrievably broken."

Leon Spinks, who ran afoul of the law twice for traffic violations on his way to Hilton Head, S.C., is there and has opened training for World Boxing Association heavyweight title defense against Muhammad Ali. Spinks, arrested Wednesday and Thursday in North Carolina for traffic violations.

Indiana and Notre Dame may not play basketball next season, although fans have expected them to. Indiana is claiming the Irish apparently don't want to play both the Hoosiers and the UCLA Bruins in the same week. Meanwhile, Notre Dame is claiming Indiana is apparently dragging its feet on signing a new two-year contract.

"The professional football career of quarterback Roman Gabriel appears to be over, and the 37-year-old veteran is upset, to say the least."

"They've killed my career," said Gabriel, a 16-year National Football League veteran who flunked the Los Angeles Rams' physical examination and was placed on waivers. He flunked the physical primarily because of a problem with his right knee.

John Hannah has made financial peace with the New England Patriots, and his National Football League linemate, Leon Gray, is expected to come to terms soon.

A University of Tennessee coed filed a $2 million suit Friday against a UT football linebacker indicted on a charge of assaulting her in a fight over a parking space. Judith Tang, 20, accused Rick Powers, 20, of Birmingham, Ala., of striking her with the back of his hand, causing permanent loss of vision in her right eye. She said the incident occurred Jan. 29.

Lopez 6 strokes back

Associated Press
HERSHEY, Pa. — Jane Blalock fired a 5-under-par 67 Friday to break a woman's course record at the Hershey Country Club and grab a 2-stroke lead after 18 holes of the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open.

Six strokes back was rookie sensation Nancy Lopez, who was stumbling in her bid to extend her all-time women's professional golf record to six straight victories and close in on the men's record of 11 to a row, set by Byron Nelson in 1945.

Her 37-38-73 left her a good ways back in the pack with 36 holes to play on the demanding 6,398-yard course. The winner takes home $7,500.

"I just didn't have the concentration today," Lopez said. "I was tired. I was thinking about interviews instead of my golf game."

Blalock, who lost to Lopez in a stirring stretch duel last weekend at Rochester, N.Y., has won 19 tournaments in her 15 years on the tour. She made a late charge Friday, picking up five birdies on the back side for a 35-52-87.

Two strokes back was Peggy Conley, with a 3-under-par 69, followed by Pat Bradley, Eva Chang and Jane Renner, all with 70s.

Blalock, who has won $48,000 this year for a career total of $521,000, captured rookie of the year honors in 1969.

In 1977 she became the fourth woman ever to earn more than $100,000 in a single season.

Already she's won $130,198 in 1978, more than double the $57,493 collected this year by runnerup JoAnne Carner, who skipped Hershey.

Lopez, 21, a woman's national collegiate champion at Tulsa University who is after her eighth victory this year, bogied the second and 15th holes but picked up a birdie on 15.

The last time she recorded an over-par round was May 28 at New Rochelle, N.Y., where she shot a 73. Sixteen of her last 18 rounds have been par or better, and of the 20 LPGA tournaments she's played in, she's finished lower than 15th only three times.

Since turning pro July 29, she has earned $133,328, making her the all-time rookie moneywinner in both men's and women's professional golf.

LIME

90% of the Lawns tested in Owensboro need Lime to correct the pH (Acidity) of the soil.

The ideal soil pH for bluegrass and fescue Lawns is 6.3 to 6.8. When this value is lower, it limits the availability of nutrient to the grass plant. This can result in a thin, unhealthy Turf.

An application of Lime (CaCO₃) will help raise the soil pH and add the much needed Nutrient Calcium to the soil.

AgriLawn is offering a special application of Lime this summer, at special low prices to encourage healthier Turf in Owensboro.

sunday school lesson

The Sunday School Lesson for June 25 is entitled, "Success and Persecution, Acts 17:1-13. Based on copyright outlines produced by the Committee on the Uniform Series and used by permission.

By DR. ELISHA DOUGLASS
In the persecution which Paul suffered in Thessalonica and Berea, about which we read today, we begin to understand why Paul's message aroused such intense hostility among unbelievers.

Thessalonica, like the modern Salonika, was a flourishing commercial city with a very diverse population. On the Aegean Sea, at the terminus of the Via Egnatia, it had direct communication with the other large cities of Greece and with Rome. With these advantages, it was a promising place for Paul to begin a European missionary journey.

We are told in Acts that Paul, upon arrival in Thessalonica, went to the synagogue, "as was his custom," and "argued" with the Jews for three weeks. At this time synagogues were often large discussion seminars, and the most usual topic was the Jewish scriptures.

A crucified messiah.
As in the past, Paul strove to demonstrate that Jesus was the true Jewish messiah. But the problem here was to explain why "it was necessary for the Christ to suffer and rise from the dead." The Jews conceived the messiah to be a conquering hero, and Jesus, because of the manner of his death, simply did not fit this picture.

In the first place, rising from the dead was not a part of the Jewish theological tradition, but more important, it was simply impossible to reconcile the concept of a messiah with the crucifixion. Until recent times, executions resulting from a sentence of death were invested with symbolic connotations, and the manner of death was commensurate with the gravity of the crime for which the sentence was inflicted and with the social status of the offender. In the Roman empire of Paul's time, crucifixion was the death associated with complete infamy, and was designed to indicate not only the retribution of society but contempt for the victim as well. Under these circumstances we can understand why Paul and his associates had such difficulty convincing Jews that Jesus was the messiah.

Conversion of the Gentiles
But apparently he had more success in convincing Gentile converts to Judaism and "Godfearers" than Jews. This explains why they went to the extent of joining with "some wicked fellows of the rabble" in order "to set the city in an uproar."

a savior was a familiar one in some pagan cults, and there were precedents for rising from the dead. It seems probable from the accounts in the Thessalonian letters that Paul was much more successful in converting pagans and "Godfearers" than he was in converting the orthodox Jews who were the immediate object of his intentions.

Paul's success with Gentiles was the cause of all the trouble that beset him in Thessalonica. The Jews of the synagogue evidently felt that he was bent on destroying their own missionary efforts among the Gentiles, and in a particularly heinous fashion by distorting the message of the messiah. Considering him to be a deadly threat to their faith — and to the faith which he himself as a Jew professed — they therefore felt that any measures would be justified in silencing him. This explains why they went to the extent of joining with "some wicked fellows of the rabble" in order "to set the city in an uproar."

leaders dragged Paul's host, Jason, and some of Paul's converts before the local court and accused them of sedition — specifically of "acting against the decrees of Caesar, saying there is another king, Jesus." Apparently Paul and Silas had gone into hiding.

We are told that the "brethren" then secretly got Paul and Silas out of the city and sent them to the neighboring city of Berea. Here the two attempted to resume their mission, but unfortunately with the same result as at Thessalonica, and doubtless for the same reasons.

"A DISTANT THUNDER"
A story of tribulation and the end times
It begins where "A Thief in the Night" ENDED...
A 1978 film by release, "A DISTANT THUNDER" is promising to be even more powerful than "A THIEF IN THE NIGHT."
Based upon many biblical references from Daniel and Revelation, "A DISTANT THUNDER" is a dramatic presentation of how things could be during the tribulation.
The story begins where "A THIEF IN THE NIGHT" left off.

Record crop expected for soybeans

markets

Soybean statistics, trading mixed

Associated Press
CHICAGO — Soybean prices retreated in nearby contracts, but surged higher in more distant months on the Chicago Board of Trade Friday. Grain prices slipped a bit.

The Department of Agriculture's grain stocks report contained no big surprises. Still, soybean stocks of 500 million bushels were more than the industry had thought, and consequently exerted some pressure on nearby contracts.

Later in the day, the department noted that the stocks included as many as 45 million bushels of seed that normally would have been planted by the time the figures were compiled. This spring, however, plantings were delayed by wet weather.

Another mediating factor was provided by an American Soybean Association survey, which estimated that farmers have sown 61.4 million acres of soybeans this year. In April, the group had estimated plantings of 63.4 million acres. Traders also have been guessing a higher figure.

Meanwhile, the industry's expectations of corn stocks were on target, although wheat stocks of 1.17 billion bushels were about 10 million bushels less than anticipated.

But another report, revealing fewer-than-expected July and August harvests, was considered negative for feedgrains. And scattered rains in the Midwest were considered beneficial to recently-planted corn and soybeans. Thus far, analysts said, growing conditions have been excellent.

At the close, soybeans were 7 1/2 cents lower to 9 cents higher, with July contracts quoted at $6.75 a bushel; wheat was 1/4 to 3/4 cents lower, July $3.21; corn was 1/4 to 1 1/2 cents lower, July $2.57; and oats were 1 1/4 cents lower, July $1.34.

$26,000 still owed

NFO dues fight continues

By DAN LOOKER

Message-Inquirer

The battle between some Davies County farmers and the National Farmers Organization over unpaid dues isn't over yet.

Almost a year after Davies Circuit Judge Robert Short ordered two farmers to pay $1,000 in back dues owed the NFO, the farm group's local treasurer Jim McCarthy received the first checks.

That hardly resolves the dispute, however. About 80 of the 130 farmers on the Davies County NFO's 1977 membership list still owe more than $800 in back dues. And McCarthy says the organization may take some of those farmers to court to collect.

"It's a possibility," McCarthy said. "I'm not saying they will be, but it's not left up to me." But McCarthy believes it isn't fair to collect dues from some farmers and not from others and thinks all of the full-time farmers on the list should pay. He doesn't think more lawsuits would alienate potential new members, since they would be brought against farmers who don't support the organization.

Until this year, NFO's three-year memberships were automatically renewed unless the farmer notified the organization within 30 days after his contract expired. This year, non-renewing one-year contracts are available, McCarthy said.

NFO has taken farmers to court to collect back dues in six states besides Kentucky. Although some farmers have argued that they were unaware that their contracts were automatically renewed, most courts have taken Judge Short's position that anyone who signs a contract is bound by it, even if he didn't read it or didn't understand that he only had 30 days every three years to cancel his membership.

Davies County NFO lost one suit against Richard Franey of Whitesville, because Franey had stopped active farming and NFO bylaws call for automatic cancellation of the contract when a member ceases farming.

In July 1977, Short ordered two active farmers, Danny Lively and Huston Simmons to pay NFO back dues. McCarthy says the NFO's lawyer has received a check from Lively but was unaware that Simmons had mailed payment on July 14 of the $400 he owed NFO.

Simmons put off paying as long as he could, and even stopped payment on a check he mailed the NFO last December. "I just didn't think it was right. I never participated in it more than one time in 17 years," he said. After the NFO threatened to take possession of some of Simmons' farm machinery, he paid.

Simmons says he and other farmers in Davies County lost interest in the NFO because of incursions of violence associated with NFO holding actions.

McCarthy disputes that, pointing out that many farmers who haven't paid dues were involved in those incidents. He suspects those farmers lost interest in NFO when they saw that it would take a long time to build an effective organization to bargain for higher commodity prices.

He said the NFO membership contracts were similar to "the old government tobacco insurance program," which was also self-renewing. "They (the farmers) knew how to get out of the organization," he asserted.

Hog, pig count down 7 percent

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The number of hogs and pigs on Kentucky farms June 1 totaled one million head, down seven percent from the same month a year ago and the smallest June inventory since 1971.

The Kentucky Crop & Livestock Reporting Service, in releasing the figures Thursday, said the estimate is 2 percent less than the March inventory.

The service attributed the reduced pig crop to increased deaths caused by severe weather the past winter and to disease. Conception rate and litter size also were low, the service said.

Nationally, the report showed hog numbers totaled 54.9 million head compared with 54.5 million last year. Breeding inventory at 8.8 million was up 1 percent.

The service estimated that 65,000 sows and gilts farrowed on 2 Kentucky farms during the March-May period, a 3 percent drop from the same period in March inventory.

Panel to study service contracts

Associated Press
FRANKFORT, Ky. — The new Professional Employment Commission held its initial meeting Friday and agreed to study procedures proposed by the Department of Personnel for awarding professional service contracts.

The five-member commission was created by the 1978 General Assembly to replace the Personal Service Contract Review Commission.

Boyle County farmer William Balden was elected chairman and said he hopes to make the work of the commission noncontroversial by discussing the contracts as openly as possible.

The awarding of personal service contracts for various professional services to state government has generated considerable controversy in the past.

The new commission will review professional services not covered by a new registry established in the Personnel Department.

Clues develop in shooting case

Associated Press
ASHLAND, Ky. — A wounded Ohio man sought since Monday in connection with a shooting and abduction is apparently alive, reportedly said by a friend who removed a bullet from his neck with a hunting knife.

Authorities have been in indirect contact with the wounded man, Bill McClain, says Detective Sgt. Curtis Keeton of the Ashland Police.

Keeton said Friday one of three Boyd County prisoners charged in connection with the incident has been allowed to make telephone calls to friends of McClain in an effort to gain information.

The officer said that after several calls he received information Thursday night that McClain is "getting along all right now."

McClain, 37, of Carrollton, Ohio, is believed to be the man who was shot at the home of Jim Grubb of Ironton, Ohio, early Monday night. Later that night, five women and a man were arrested in Ashland and charged with kidnapping in incidents police believe involved getting medical help for McClain.

The prisoners are Thelma Dell, 26, of Shively, Ky.; Tina Schindler, 25, Carrollton, and

However, Keeton said officers now have received information that McClain may have had a friend remove the bullet from his neck with a hunting knife at a residence somewhere in rural Lawrence County Tuesday.

Keeton said contact with McClain was made through Ms. Schindler.

"We let her make calls to some friends, who get in touch with him and then pass information back to her," he said. "She has made several calls over the past few days from the jail, and Keeton said authorities now believe McClain is somewhere in Ironton or Lawrence County."

Kentucky authorities have no warrants for McClain but apparently want to question him.

GOP nominates Hopkins for 6th congressional seat

Associated Press
LEXINGTON, Ky. — To no one's surprise, several hundred Republicans nominated Larry Hopkins of Lexington by acclamation as the party's congressional nominee in the 6th district for November.

Hopkins, a state senator, will oppose Democratic nominee Tom Easterly of Frankfort, also a state senator. Hopkins succeeds Mary Louise Foust of Shelbyville who withdrew a few weeks ago.

About 1,000 Republicans from the 17 counties were eligible to cast votes and there was no firm estimate of how many attended the special meeting in a Lexington motel.

Hopkins, who had been thinking of running for governor in 1979, was nominated by his Methodist pastor, the Rev. Donald Durham. After another nominating speech, a Boyle County delegate moved to shut off nominations and elect Hopkins unanimously.

In an acceptance speech, the 46-year-old stock broker said: "I want to go to Congress to tax less, spend less and not cut, but to eliminate waste. That is the answer to inflation and it's time we let Washington in on it."

He said he would not offer himself or accept the nomination "if I were not convinced beyond any doubt whatsoever that we could save America and save our freedom."

He asked his GOP colleagues to tell everyone in the blizzard district about the difference in political philosophy of the major nominees.

"Point out the difference between mine and my opponent's voting record in the Kentucky legislature," he said. "Show them this AFL-CIO account of how my opponent slipped through the

Nuclear foes plan non-violent protest

Mark Megenty, 24, of English, Ind., reviews some of the materials on non-violent protest. Megenty uses the materials in a workshop he conducts on the tactics for members of the Paddlewheel Alliance, an environmental group which plans to demonstrate today at the Marble Hill nuclear plant site in southern Indiana.

Associated Press
ENGLISH, Ind. — Borrowing strategies forged during the civil rights and anti-war movements, Mark Megenty is training opponents of nuclear power in the fragile art of non-violent protest.

Megenty, 24, a carpentry teacher at a vocational school and a veteran of anti-nuclear demonstrations, launched the training program a few months ago. Most of the participants have been members of the Paddlewheel Alliance, an environmental group with chapters in Indiana and Kentucky.

"I'm an environmentalist to begin with," he said in an interview at his parents' rural home near here. "I pay a lot of lip service to a lot of environmental causes."

One of the causes was opposition to Public Service Indiana's proposed nuclear generating plant at Marble Hill near the Ohio River. Through conversations with members of a food co-op in Bloomington, Megenty decided to turn his verbal support into action and the idea for non-violence training was born.

"From there, it kind of snowballed. It's impossible to get involved, especially if you can see something coming of it," he said. Megenty, who graduated from Indiana University in 1973 with a bachelor's degree in biology, views the anti-nuclear movement and the non-violent approach to the protest as a moral imperative.

"We really feel it's morally wrong to bring substances into the environment that we're going to have to be dealing with for years," he said. "Most, if not all, legal remedies for opposing nuclear power have been exhausted. Civil disobedience is about the only thing now that can put the issue of Marble Hill and nuclear power before the courts. It can put it back on a jury level and let some citizens have a say in it."

Participants in Megenty's training sessions are exposed to a blend of pop psychology and consensus politics. They are divided into affinity groups, composed of "people who understand their reason for being there and who trust each other," he explained.

From there, they engage in role-playing, reacting to situations posed by the trainers. The first is known as the elephant walk, in which participants are blindfolded and led through a maze by group leaders using signals — not words — as signals.

"Then a couple of provocateurs come in and knock them down and break the line apart. And those signals have to see the game through," Megenty said. "They have to understand the logistics of pulling off a direct action. If you went to a nuclear plant, you'd be like you were blind, because you wouldn't know what to expect."

Then the students are faced with logistic problems: what to do if someone sprains an ankle at a demonstration; if an argument breaks out between two protesters; if a demonstrator is beaten during the course of an arrest.

They must think fast: the solutions are due in a matter of seconds. And there is no majority rule; there must be consensus among all the members of the group on every decision. Megenty says that eliminates the problem of splintering in a real demonstration.

Megenty's sessions are not only designed to train participants in non-violence but also to expose anyone who might have trouble with the peaceful approach to protest.

Some of them are inclined to a violent action. They have romantically entertained the idea of sabotage," he said. "But it comes out in the role playing. It's hard to control."

The strategy faces its first test on Saturday, when the Paddlewheel Alliance stages a demonstration at Madison, a city near the plant site in southern Indiana.

Currently, the Paddlewheel Alliance has no plans to demonstrate at the Marble Hill site itself.

"It could be very risky," he said. "These workers have a lot to lose if that plant gets closed down. For them, it's a job, it's food on the table, it's clothes on their families' backs. It's a real gut feeling on both sides."

Megenty said opposing nuclear power isn't just a left-wing cause; it cuts across all political lines. In fact, the American Legion and the city council in Tell City recently joined the Paddlewheel Alliance to protest a nuclear dumping site in southern Indiana, he said.

Court orders roadwork to resume

Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A road improvement project on Kentucky 292 in Martin County, which was halted when local residents blocked the road to protest damage caused by overweight coal trucks, is being resumed.

State Transportation Secretary Calvin Grayson has directed the Bureau of Highways contractors to resume work.

Members of the Martin County Better Roads Organization aimed off a 3.9-mile section of the highway near Lovely earlier this month to dramatize complaints that heavy trucks were tearing up the gravel and asphalt road and spreading coal dust.

The chain and fence blockade prevented construction workers working on a $400,000 road base reconstruction project from moving in their equipment.

Transportation officials, concerned about the delay in a project originally scheduled for completion Sept. 1, filed suit in Martin Circuit Court last week seeking to reopen the road.

Martin Circuit Judge W.B. Hazelrigg said Thursday the makeshift barricade could remain, so long as Bureau of Highways trucks, construction equipment and school buses are able to use the road.

Stuart Victor, Grayson's assistant, said in a telephone interview Friday that "from news reports and Kentucky DOT personnel present at yesterday's hearing in Judge Hazelrigg's court at town, Secretary Grayson understands that local residents are temporarily restrained from interfering with the Kentucky DOT project on KY 292 in Martin County."

Victor said Grayson told contractors to resume work and make every effort to control dust during construction.

"He is optimistic this can be accomplished, while coal truck traffic is not using the road," Victor said.

Transportation officials had not received a copy of the judge's order Friday, but Victor said officials would comply with the ruling.

Local residents contend they have the legal right to block the road, since state money was used in construction of that 3.9-mile section. They say that stretch was financed by private contributions and is private property.

However, the state says it has maintained the segment, which connects state-financed portions of the highway constructed in the mid-1960s. The state questions whether residents can legally block the road since public funds have been spent for its maintenance.

All he has to do is stay on for eight seconds. But that can be the longest eight seconds of the day when the rodeo performer gets a particularly spirited bronco. He knows that when he gives the final nod of his head and that big gate is swung open, some horses turn into twisting, turning beasts who seem to breathe fire and stomp lightning. Yet every performer hopes he will get that very kind of mount. Unless the horse gets a wild display during the ride, the judge will score the rider low and he will miss the prize. Anything that brings a special reward usually requires a person to go beyond his normal performance. Shouldn't we all then be ready to give an extra share of our talents and abilities if we want eternal life—the greatest reward ever promised to man? This Sunday come to church and find how it's done.

C'MON! LET'S GET OUTA HERE!

ASTRO-GRAPH
Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday
June 24, 1978

Knowledge and experience you've garnered in the past will be put to profitable uses this coming year. Big things you can't pull off before are now possible and probable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Avoid going into debt today, especially over items you really don't need. It might take longer and be harder to pay off than you now realize. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 488, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10101. Be sure to specify birth sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Doing nice things for others this evening is commendable, but won't completely atone for that abrasive attitude you've had all day.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Even though you feel like doing a lot of work today, you could be all thumbs. Don't fight the odds. Weap it up early. Get out with pleasant companions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Aim high and don't let discouragement if at first things don't go your way today. Recall the tale of the hare and the tortoise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Frustrations are likely today, because you're apt to set your sights on the wrong objectives. You'll make the corrections, however, and then it's smooth sailing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Rather than get uptight today regarding things you can't amend or control, focus your efforts and attention on areas where you can do so.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Be careful today that material things don't become an issue between you and someone you're very fond of. Everything will work out if left unchanged.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
People you associate with today tend to mirror your depliment. If you want pleasant encounters, behave in a friendly manner.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Missing your keen imagination makes tasks appear difficult today. If you work instead of rationalizing, you'll see they're really a snap.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
You're not in one of your more sociable moods today. Forego the crowds. Plan a quiet evening at home with the family.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
A day filled with heavy responsibilities and pressures will end quite nicely with friends this evening. You'll completely forget earlier strains.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
You'll laugh at the negative thinking you did all day long when tonight you discover you're in a stronger position than you realized.

 Hydrofair

Hydrofair parades are always fun; and this year's should be no exception.

Use common sense

Hydrofair — safe affair

Messenger-Inquirer

The safety director of the Owensboro Hydrofair, Robbie Robertson, has some simple advice for spectators: "Two words will cover it — common sense."

Approximately 17 boats manned by firemen, radio operators and emergency medical technicians will be on the Ohio River to assist with accidents, Robertson says, and a helicopter will be available for speedy evacuations. Robertson, Fire Chief Walter Freeman and Police Traffic Sgt. Curtis Johnson, during recent interviews, offered advice to spectators ranging from how to avoid accidents to locating lost children to finding pickpockets.

"Stay away from the boats," says Freeman. "Because of the fuel they use. . . Don't get too close in case they have a problem." The advice applies particularly to English Park where the unlimited powerboat pits are located.

Every year someone gets bitten by a snake, Robertson says so he advises spectators to watch where they're walking and "keep away from the racials."

And each year barefooted spectators get cut feet from broken glass, he says. So wear shoes.

The anticipated influx of crowds — and their cars — pose potential pedestrian accidents, says Johnson. "It's going to be congested in the downtown area," he says. "Walk with the lights. Don't jaywalk. Cross at the corners with the lights."

Don't drive downtown expecting a choice parking spot on a side street, Johnson says. First Street from Frederica to Davies streets will be closed to traffic starting at 6 a.m. Monday. Side streets — Davies, Allen and St. Ann — between 1st and 2nd streets also will be closed.

In addition, Woodford, Dublin and Hanning lanes between 2nd Street and the river will be designated no parking and tow away zones, Johnson said. Cars illegally parked there will be towed away.

Bicycle riders are to stay out of those restricted zones, too, Johnson said. They can pose a hazard to pedestrians.

Owensboro Police will have a "command bus" at 1st and Frederica streets to assist spectators. Parents can pick up cards to be pinned on youngsters' shirts saying the child is lost and should be taken to the bus, Johnson said. Parents should check the bus in case they've lost track of a child, he said.

The large crowds of pedestrians also attract pickpockets, Johnson has some advice to foil them:

don't carry large sums of money, carry your billfold in a front pocket or in a hip pocket that is buttoned, and leave your credit cards at home.

"Let's face it, someone is going to have their pocket picked no matter how many men we have out there," Johnson says. (Police have cancelled all days off to beef up the patrol force during Hydrofair, Johnson says.)

Robertson has some advice for boaters: stay off the race course, and don't litter.

If the U.S. Coast Guard gives you for throwing something overboard into the river, you could, upon conviction of the misdemeanor, be liable for fines of $500 to $2,500 and a jail term of 30 days to a year.

Hydrofair chairman says full-time staffing needed

Messenger-Inquirer

Hydrofair's Chairman Tom Gaffey sits behind the desk in his office at the Red Barn on Carter Road drinking coffee. It's 8 a.m. and the phone hasn't rung once.

That's unusual, he says. "Usually the damn thing starts ringing off the wall by now."

Putting on a Gold Cup hydroplane race has meant at least three to four times as much work for the Hydrofair committee as past races did, he estimates.

"Personally, I feel we've reached the point where we need a full-time executive like the Chamber of Commerce," he says. "There are so many things the chairman has to do. Probably 60 to 70 percent of my time in the past seven or eight months has been devoted to the Hydrofair."

Since the rotating Hydrofair chairmen also have their own businesses to run, they stand to lose considerable business and money by devoting too much time to Hydrofair.

"I'm not saying we're going to hire a full-time director, but I think it's time we started talking about it," Gaffey adds, taking another sip of coffee.

Lately his days have been starting at 5 a.m. and running long into the night and they'll get longer as Hydrofair activities begin to pick up.

This year's expanded list of activities will put a strain on Gaffey's time in coming days. He is expected to make an appearance at every event — some of which are as far away as Whitesville.

"There are so many things that could be done better if we had a full-time executive," he says. "I think we should keep the board of directors and the chairman, but there is so much promotion to be done."

Helping hand

Sumner helps make Hydrofair easy for elderly, disabled

Messenger-Inquirer

As fresh as a breeze off the Ohio River, soft-spoken David Sumner is a contrast to the commercialism inevitably a part of any crowd-drawing event.

Sumner started a new "event" connected with the hydroplane race this year, one that won't produce a great deal of money but will help in more than just a small way.

In its tenth year, the Hydrofair will provide free transportation and seating for the elderly and the disabled can watch the race July 2.

Sumner's been in charge of making those arrangements. Along with other volunteers, he's lined up free bus transportation that will run hourly from the Roosevelt House and Lincoln Mall to Peter B. English park from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on race day.

At the park, viewers will be able to watch the race under the shelter of "a huge parachute tent" from Fort Campbell that has room for 500 persons.

Six nurses, two doctors, an ambulance and a medical helicopter will be at the park or nearby in case of emergency. Portable toilets will be provided. Sumner says he's had trouble finding toilets that will accommodate wheelchairs, but "we're going to have portapotties, even if we have to have them built."

The buses, which will include an English double-decker, model from Evansville, won't be able to pick up wheelchairs. But persons bound to a wheelchair can go to the Wendell Foster Center for transportation, Sumner says.

He also secured a grant from the state aging office that will pay $2.50 of the $4 Hydrofair button through June 30. (The price will go up to $5 after that, as for the general public.) Although any Kentucky resident 60 or older will be able to get the admission buttons for $1.50, Sumner hasn't been able to find a subsidy for admission for the disabled, who will pay the full admission cost.

Setting up the arrangements for the first time hasn't been easy. "I've been spending 30 hours a week on the Hydrofair in addition to my regular job," says Sumner, who at 54 has worked in the family shoe business since his father retired last January. "It's a good thing the shoe business has been slow," he jokes.

Sumner's interest in the disabled is more than casual. He worked with the mentally retarded from 1967 until January, when he left his job as program coordinator at the Port Worth School for the Mentally Retarded to return to Owensboro.

He's modest about his role in making it easier for everyone to get a view of the hydroplane race, crediting the Mayor's Committee for the Handicapped, Robbie Robertson of the Brescia Speech and Hearing Clinic and the Green River Area Development District staff with doing much of the work. All of the medical and emergency services available on race day have been provided free, he adds.

Sumner hopes the Hydrofair program for the elderly and disabled will be "a catalyst to work on future programs." He envisions putting English Park to use for the disabled during other times of the year, with a sculpture garden for the blind, perhaps, or with an amphitheater for concerts and with permanent restrooms modified to serve the disabled. The federal and state governments have grant money available for such things, he points out. "If the city shows an interest in serving the disabled," "The people in these agencies that control grant money, I think they will be looking at Owensboro," he says.

"I hope we're setting a precedent for this and much more in the future," he adds. "I don't care how it happens or who gets the credit, I just want to see it done."

Old-timers

They forget . . . and call it 'The Regatta';
for them, Hydrofair is more than a boat race

Messenger-Inquirer

Old-timers are easy to spot at Owensboro's Hydrofair.

The first thing that gives them away is their speech. They keep calling it "The Regatta" — the name it bore until 1977. Most, however, don't remember that the original and proper name was "Owensboro Aqua Festival." That name was selected in February 1969 and promptly forgotten by the time the first race was run in June that year.

"Owensboro Hydrofair" was selected in the fall of 1976 and people are gradually learning to use that name — part of the time.

But the name isn't really important. The Regatta . . . uh, Hydrofair is really people.

Old-timers have learned that although the numbers of people at any given Hydrofair event can usually be figured by taking the official crowd estimate and dividing by two, the number of cars will always exceed the number of parking spaces.

This year, at least one pre-race crowd estimate went as high as 200,000. If that happens, plan on parking in Central City and walking to the riverfront. They're also talking about a parade of 500 customized cars through downtown

Saturday night. That should help keep traffic at a pace where even drivers can enjoy the snail races alongside Frederica Street.

From a reporter's standpoint, Hydrofair is looked forward to with the same zeal as a trip to the dentist. But it leaves more exciting memories.

From an old-timer's standpoint, Hydrofair is:

✓ Stunt pilots zipping around under the bridge.

✓ A man jumping off the bridge as a Hydrofair stunt — and not even being drunk at the time.

✓ The U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds rattling the dishes in your cabinet.

✓ The look on a man's face when he crawls out of a portable "facility" after it overturns and rolls down the boat launching ramp at the foot of Frederica.

✓ The 5,000 people partying on Yellow Banks Island where booze, drugs and whatever is plentiful and police are not.

✓ The people in Smothers Park who spend their time watching the people on Yellow Banks Island through binoculars.

✓ People who think they're overdressed in bikinis.

✓ Fireworks and kids watching fireworks.

✓ Kids playing "dodge-pedestrian" on bicycles.

✓ People who camp out in Smothers Park on Saturday night so they can grab choice seats for Sunday.

✓ Getting at least three sunburns.

✓ Parades and kids watching parades.

✓ Trying to find someone on the riverfront.

✓ Wall-to-wall people, street parties, music, noise, food and Jaycees trying to sell you buttons.

✓ Trying to find shelter from an occasional summer frog-strangler thunderstorm.

✓ Hearing a rumor that boats are racing on the river somewhere beyond the wall of people over there.

✓ Finding someone who still remembers the hydroplanes "Miss Owensboro" and "Owensboro's Own."

✓ Adding to your sunburn at the go-kart races.

But the best part is when you can say, "Remember last week at Hydrofair? Boy, that was some party wasn't it?"

Looking for a parking place?

If you're trying to figure out where you're going to park for Hydrofair activities, especially on race day, at least you're not alone. As of press time, Hydrofair volunteers still were hoping that they could arrange a bus transportation system so crowds could park some distance away. However, nothing had been finalized. If the plan falls through, you'll pretty much have to fend for yourself, so allow plenty of time to walk. At any rate, don't bother taking a chance on streets that are marked closed — you'll surely be towed away.

Unlimited hydroplanes can take drivers like Bill Muncey down the straightaway at well over 150 mph.

Unlimited racing still a novelty

Parade of boats lengthy, memorable

Messenger-Inquirer
Remember "Notre Dame," "Miss Owensboro" and "Myr's Special?"

Don't feel too bad if you don't. It was nine years ago they appeared on the Ohio River, vying for the first Kentucky Governor's Cup Regatta.

Nobody was sure what kind of impact unlimited hydroplanes would have on Owensboro. And the novelty has yet to wear off. The crowds continue to assemble in the thousands when the unlimiteds come to town.

This year, the stop at Owensboro will be known as the Gold Cup. It's more than a race here. It's a tradition.

In 1969, Bill Sterrett of Owensboro piloted "Miss Budweiser" to victory in the first Owensboro Regatta. He established an average speed of 92.78 miles per hour. Finishing third that year in "Miss U.S." was a man who would make a definite impression on Owensboro in the years to come — Bill Muncey.

Muncey asserted himself the following year, but this time with a new boat, "Myr's Sheet Metal." On race day the Myr's team proved too much competition for the rest of the field.

In the final heat of the day, Dean Chenoweth in "Miss Budweiser" edged Muncey by more than 13 seconds, but still, Muncey's team had amassed 175 more points than Chenoweth.

Chenoweth turned in the fastest time of the day when he pushed his hydroplane entry to a 2 1/4 mile lap at an average speed of 105.388 m.p.h. in the championship heat. Owensboro's Bill Sterrett Jr. grabbed third place with 827 points in "Miss Budweiser II." Also that year, Bill's younger brother, Terry, piloted "Miss Owensboro," owned by his father, Bill Sterrett Sr., to a fifth-place finish.

The following year Muncey returned to Owensboro with a new boat, "Atlas Van Lines." That year Muncey had to rely on his many years of experience as he trailed local favorite Bill Sterrett going into the championship heat.

Sterrett in "Notre Dame" led Muncey by 100 points going into the championship heat but failed to finish when his boat drowned out. Muncey finished second to Billy Schumacher in "Pride of Pay 'N Pak" in the championship heat, but won the cup on points.

The top speed at the 1971 race belonged to Sterrett who recorded a one-lap speed of 108.896 m.p.h., a new course record.

A small controversy clouded the third heat when a preliminary ruling indicated Chenoweth had out in front of McCormick without the required three length lead. However, Chenoweth was absolved of any wrongdoing and the result stood.

Muncey finished the 1972 Regatta week just like he started it — in record fashion.

After establishing a qualifying record of 112.079 m.p.h. on Thursday before the Sunday finals, Muncey set lap, heat and race records in his successful quest for a third straight Governor's Cup.

Muncey won heat 1-A and the championship heat, placed second in heat 2-A and finished with 1,101 total points. Billy Schumacher drove the "Pride of Pay 'N Pak" to seconds in two heats and first in another for a total of 1,000 points and second place.

"Miss Madison," with Charlie Dunn driving, finished third with 869 points. Terry Sterrett piloted "Miss Budweiser" to 4th in the final standings with 694 points.

The 1973 Regatta signaled a brief end of the Muncey era. Muncey came within a few seconds of winning his fourth straight Governor's Cup but was edged in the final heat by Chenoweth in "Miss Budweiser." "Miss Budweiser" and Muncey's "Atlas Van Lines" went into the final race separated by less than fifty points. Only three boats answered the starting gun in the final race. Chenoweth, Muncey and "Red Man" driven by McCormick. "Miss Budweiser" took the lead at the start and dueling Atlas for three laps before pulling away. It was the first win for "Miss Budweiser" since 1971 and it's second in Owensboro.

The 1973 races were marred by controversy. Six of the 10 boats, including "Miss Budweiser" and "Atlas Van Lines," were penalized one lap during the afternoon for jumping the starting gun. Another boat was disqualified for the same offense.

The 1974 Regatta was hampered by uncooperative weather conditions. Brisk winds and choppy waters caused a one-day delay but George Henley didn't seem to mind the 24 hour wait, he piloted "Pay 'N Pak" to a winning average speed of 106.890 miles per hour and took the sixth annual Governor's Cup.

The 1975 Regatta was also a windy affair. The series of heats were delayed two hours because of rough water. But when the racing began, Bill Schumacher in "Waldfield" ran away with the show.

In 1976 Muncey returned to the winners circle after a three-year absence. Muncey called down his fourth Governor's Cup victory by outdistancing Tom D'Eath in runner-up "Miss U.S."

On the way to victory Muncey set a new speed mark for the Owensboro course in qualifications at 123.119 m.p.h.

In 1977 Muncey again demonstrated his dominance. In the championship heat he pulled a trick from his bag of experience. He gunned his boat turning the corner before the starting line, went outside then zoomed inside, effectively bunching the rest of the boats behind him. The four other boats in the heat had to slow down to avoid hitting each other and Muncey walked to his 42nd career victory.

The 77 race, the first to be called Hydrofair, was virtually a two-boat race. Muncey, still in "Atlas Van Lines," and "Miss Budweiser," driven by Mickey Remund, each won two of the four preliminary heats before Muncey grabbed the championship heat and the Cup.

It takes innovation to remain popular

Messenger-Inquirer

The unlimited boat class may never have reached the popularity it enjoys today if it hadn't been for some innovative ideas.

The unlimited class was established in 1922, but was in jeopardy after World War II when nobody could find engines to fit the American Power Boat Association's 723-cubic-inch requirement.

A new avenue suddenly opened up when engines from surplus warplanes were made available. Allison and Rolls Royce engines were altered to fit the requirements and the unlimited class was back in business.

The biggest spurt of boat building in the history of the sport took place from 1948 to 1950 when 30 new unlimited hydroplanes were constructed. At full speed, the new breed of hydroplanes skimmed the surface of the water with only the outer tips of the sponsons and a single blade of the propeller touching down.

By 1952, the "30-Mo-Shun" had recorded a speed of 178.497 miles per hour.

Bill Muncey came onto the racing scene in 1956. The newcomer promptly won the Gold Cup, which was held in Detroit that year.

Muncey then strung together 14 wins in Willard Rhodes' "Miss Thirtway III" from 1959 through 1963. During that period, Muncey's boat completed 77 of the 85 heats it started, winning 46 of them and 14 races. He also captured two Gold Cups and set a straightaway mark of 192.001 m.p.h.

It wasn't until 1975 that the record for a single hull fell as constructed. At full speed, the "Pride of Pay 'N Pak" became the most successful in unlimited racing history as it took 18 victories.

"Pay 'N Pak" owner Dave Heersperger retired in 1975 after Muncey made an irresistible offer and purchased his three boats and about 30 engines. Muncey then worked out a five-year pact with Atlas Van Lines, combining the most successful hull (16 wins) with the most successful driver (33 wins).

Two years after Muncey set the straightaway mark, Roy Doby broke it with a 200.419 m.p.h. mark.

During the period 1966-1970, the Unlimited Racing Commission, which was created in 1958, tried to get away from the sports' dependency on the expensive and scarce warplane engines. Only one experiment paid off. Owensboro's Bill Sterrett Sr. won the Detroit World Championship Regatta in 1967 in "Miss Chrysler Crew" using a pair of Chrysler auto engines.

From 1948 to 1976, only four cabover hulls had won major unlimited races — "Skip-A-Long" in 1949, "Scooter" in 1954, "Lincoln Thrift" in 1973 and "Miss U.S." in 1975 and 1976.

However, the sport's biggest critic of cabover styling, Bill Muncey, became instrumental in proving the potential of its configuration. Last year, Muncey won more races in the new "Atlas Van Lines" cabover model than all previous past war cabovers. Significant credit for the achievement goes to "Atlas Van Lines" crew chief Jim Lucero. Lucero spent two years researching aerodynamic principles at the Boeing Aircraft facility and used lightweight building materials and a new adhesive substance to reduce his new boat's weight. In its first year, the boat won six races in nine starts — the best record of any cabover in the sport.

Jim Clapp introduced the novel turbine-powered "U-36" in 1974. He died four months before the season opened.

Equipped with twin Lycoming T-53 gas turbines weighing 500 pounds each and developing 1700 horses apiece, the much heralded Ron Jones hull lived up to expectations, setting a world record 113.464 m.p.h. pace for a 1 1/4 mile heat at the Tri-Cities World Championship race. But, the big white fork-tailed boat never had a chance to rake in the honors, throwing an engine part through its bottom in the following race at Seattle, Wash., and sinking.

As soon as Muncey put Heersperger's racing equipment in the water, he was an instant winner. For the first time since 1973, Muncey won a race. Muncey lost the next two races but then reeled off four consecutive victories.

Muncey boosted his career total to 38 victories in 1978. The five season wins combined to give Muncey his fifth national championship. The Atlas Van Lines marketing vice president was the first owner-driver to win a national championship since Guy Lombardo (that's right, the old band leader) accomplished the feat in 1948.

The year 1977 brought a show-down of two famous teams — "Miss Budweiser" and "Atlas Van Lines." "Miss Budweiser" took the championship, winning three races and running second four other times. "Miss Budweiser" also completed all the heats in which she started, a rarity.

Both "Atlas Van Lines" and "Miss Budweiser" broke the 130 m.p.h. barrier on the Detroit River in 1977. Muncey was first to hit the magic number and "Miss Budweiser" bettered the record minutes later with a 132.428 m.p.h. qualifying speed.

On the dark side of the sport, driver Jerry Bangs died on Lake Washington when he was thrown from his boat in rough water.

First Gold Cup winner ran 23 mph on 96-mile course

"The Gold Cup is the Kentucky Derby, the World Series and the Indianapolis 500 all rolled into one aqua carnival of speed first contested in 1904," says Fred Farley, historian of the Unlimited Racing Commission of the American Power Boat Association.

According to Farley's research, gasoline-powered boats have been around since 1887 when Gottlieb Daimler hitched a crude petrol motor to the rear of a rowboat on the River Seine in Paris.

The first contest for the Gold Cup — officially known as the American Power Boat Association Challenge Cup — followed almost 20 years later.

The first course was laid in 1904 on the Hudson River in New York — 14 nautical miles up and down the river.

That first race was won by a man named Carl Rottke who piloted the "Standard" an average 23.189 miles per hour over a 96-mile race.

For the first 11 years, the race remained in New York state. The location was determined by the yacht club of the winning boat rather than, as it is today, by the city with the highest financial bid. In 1917, the Gold Cup moved west to the Mississippi River at Minneapolis. Speeds were beginning to climb. Gar Wood, who won the cup four times as an owner and five times as a driver, turned in a phenomenal 70.4 m.p.h. in a 20-mile heat at Detroit in 1920 — a record that stood until 1946.

Beginning in 1922, the Gold Cup was open only to boats with displacement designs. The intent of these new rules was to put Gold Cup racing into the range of more pocketbooks than had previously been the case and to encourage the construction of boats for the race that would be useful for something besides racing.

But things didn't work out as the rulemakers intended. Costs continued to spiral upward and competing boats were distinctly not the desired "gentlemen's runabouts" and were nothing but pure racers.

During World War II, gasoline rationing forced the suspension of Gold Cup racing. When it resumed in 1946, a rejuvenated format was in evidence. Allison and Rolls-Royce Merlin aircraft engines were expected to increase enthusiasm as they were introduced to the sport.

Only one of the 17 starters in the 1948 race in Detroit was powered by such an engine — an Allison V-1710. It set a new speed record of 77.911 m.p.h. for a three-mile lap.

Messenger-Inquirer

In the nine-year history of unlimited hydroplane racing in Owensboro, there's been but one occasion for out-of-towners to squawk about a home-course advantage.

That was in the 1969 when Owensboro's Bill Sterett won the inaugural race on the Ohio.

Since then, there have been times when hydroplane drivers from Owensboro have come close, but there were no more winners.

Sterett, who concluded his racing career after the 1969 season, is one of four Owensboro residents who have competed on home waters. His son, Terry, and Jim Jr., raced in the early '70s, and Jim McCormick has raced in five Owensboro regattas, including the first and last ones.

In fact, it was the senior Sterett and McCormick who first went to the City of Owensboro and the local chamber of commerce with the idea of bringing the sport to town. They had seen other cities package a week of sports and recreation activities with a regatta, and thought Owensboro would benefit from doing the same thing.

The city and chamber went for the idea and pledged $5,000 each to get things started. Since, the race has grown. The purse in 1969 was $15,500. This year, it's $110,000.

Sterett's winner's share in the first Owensboro regatta was $4,500. It was one of several nice paychecks on the way to topping the national point standings that year.

McCormick drove Miss Madison in 1968 and finished sixth at Owensboro.

In 1970, Sterett was on the sidelines, but his sons were in the thick of the competition. Bill (Billy) Sterett Jr. finished third and came close to winning the Kentucky Governor's Cup. And Terry Sterett finished fifth.

Billy, driving Miss Budweiser II, won one preliminary heat, finished second in another and was challenging for the lead in the final heat. But mechanical problems caused his hydroplane to lose power after three laps and he had to settle for fifth in the final heat.

He also had misfortune in the 1971 regatta, in which McCormick recorded a third-place finish in Miss Madison. Sterett had a 100-point lead going into the final heat — a race he did not finish.

Sterett was driving a hydroplane called Notre Dame that year. The craft, going into the first turn of the first lap, was hit by the rear of a boat from other boats. He kept Notre Dame running until the third lap, when it cooked out for good.

Sterett, who had set course records in winning two preliminary heats, had to settle for a fourth-place finish overall. McCormick was second and third in the early heats and third in the finale.

McCormick was the center of a controversial ruling after one of the early heats. He led Dean Chenoweth in Miss Budweiser until the third lap when Chenoweth surged into the lead.

A preliminary ruling indicated that Chenoweth had cut in before having the required three-lap lead. If the ruling stood, McCormick would have been named the winner of the race. However, after an investigation, a referee ruled there was no foul.

McCormick would only say "it was close." The closeness was emphasized by the fact that his goggles were broken by the force of the water from the Budweiser.

Terry Sterett, who campaigned Miss Budweiser to a second-place national standing in 1972, finished fourth in Owensboro that year. McCormick, driving Miss Tineex, was eighth.

In 1973, McCormick finished third, driving his own Red Man hydroplane. He took two seconds in the preliminary heats and finished third in the final heat.

McCormick was seriously injured in a crash at Miami the Thursday before the first race of 1974. He was thrown from the boat during a practice run. McCormick recovered in time to compete in the last two races that summer, but not at Owensboro.

Ironically, the driver who replaced McCormick at Miami was killed in a crash on race day. Skip Walther, who lived in Owensboro and managed a business in Greenville, was a preliminary race run when the boat went out of control and flipped several times at about 140 miles an hour.

McCormick opened the 1975 season in the Pride of Pay 'N Pak, but lost that driving assignment after a couple of races. "I do not want to say that I quit," he said at the time. "I do not want to say that they fired me. It was a mutual agreement that it was an unsatisfactory arrangement."

He entered his own boat, the former Red Man, in the Owensboro race. This time it was repainted and renamed Owensboro's Own. More than 1,000 local students went to the trouble of submitting names in a week-long name-the-hydroplane contest and Owensboro residents contributed more than $4,000 to get the boat ready.

But when race week arrived, Owensboro's Own failed to complete the one lap needed to qualify for the race.

In 1976, another Owensboro's Own was in the race, but it was a different craft with a different owner. Financial backing came from the Owensboro Regatta Committee. The new Owensboro's Own (it was the Miss North Tool before the Owensboro race) finished third in one heat on the Ohio and failed to start for a second. A faulty battery hookup was blamed.

McCormick came back out of retirement again last summer when he brought his former Red Man hydroplane to the pits. The boat carried the colors of Santa Rita Homes that time. McCormick took a third in one heat and failed to finish another.

Bill Sterett Sr. probably made the biggest news at the 1978 Owensboro race, though he wasn't a scheduled driver.

He borrowed a hydroplane to take a ride with his wife and he ended up driving the boat up a steep bank on the south side of the Ohio River. He apparently passed out after inhaling fumes.

Sterett was hospitalized 3½ months, recovering from a stroke that apparently occurred as a result of the crash. His family reports he is doing well now, though he hasn't returned to work at his crane business.

The Steretts say they are out of racing for good now. The family business demands too much of their time. McCormick, now 44, likes to come up with surprises and could be racing at any time, though no plans have been announced.
